LOST AND FOUND

London based artist Perspicere, Latin for perspective, produces street art from kilometres long pieces of thread. His first solo show 'LOST AND FOUND' is themed around the emotions that he and many others have experienced as a result of lockdowns. The images paint a picture of a society emotionally lost due to the pandemic.

Known for his large 3D string installations, one of Perspicere's most notable large-scale works, Screaming Man on Shoreditch High Street reflected on frustration felt after a six month-long creative block. Unfortunately, the installation was set on fire within two hours of the artworks completion, yet Perspicere remains nonplussed, "Once it's done it's done."

His smaller works are figurative and photorealistic portraits. Created by wrapping thread around nails, an unbroken line is forged akin to when drawing without taking pen from paper. He creates these unique artworks by using a single piece of unbroken sewing thread. Beginning as a single line, the work evolves into a complex, crisscrossed piece of art.

'LOST AND FOUND' features 16 original works from Perspicere and the limited release of a zinc plate etched print run. Pieces will be accompanied by a QR code which takes you to a video of the artworks being made.

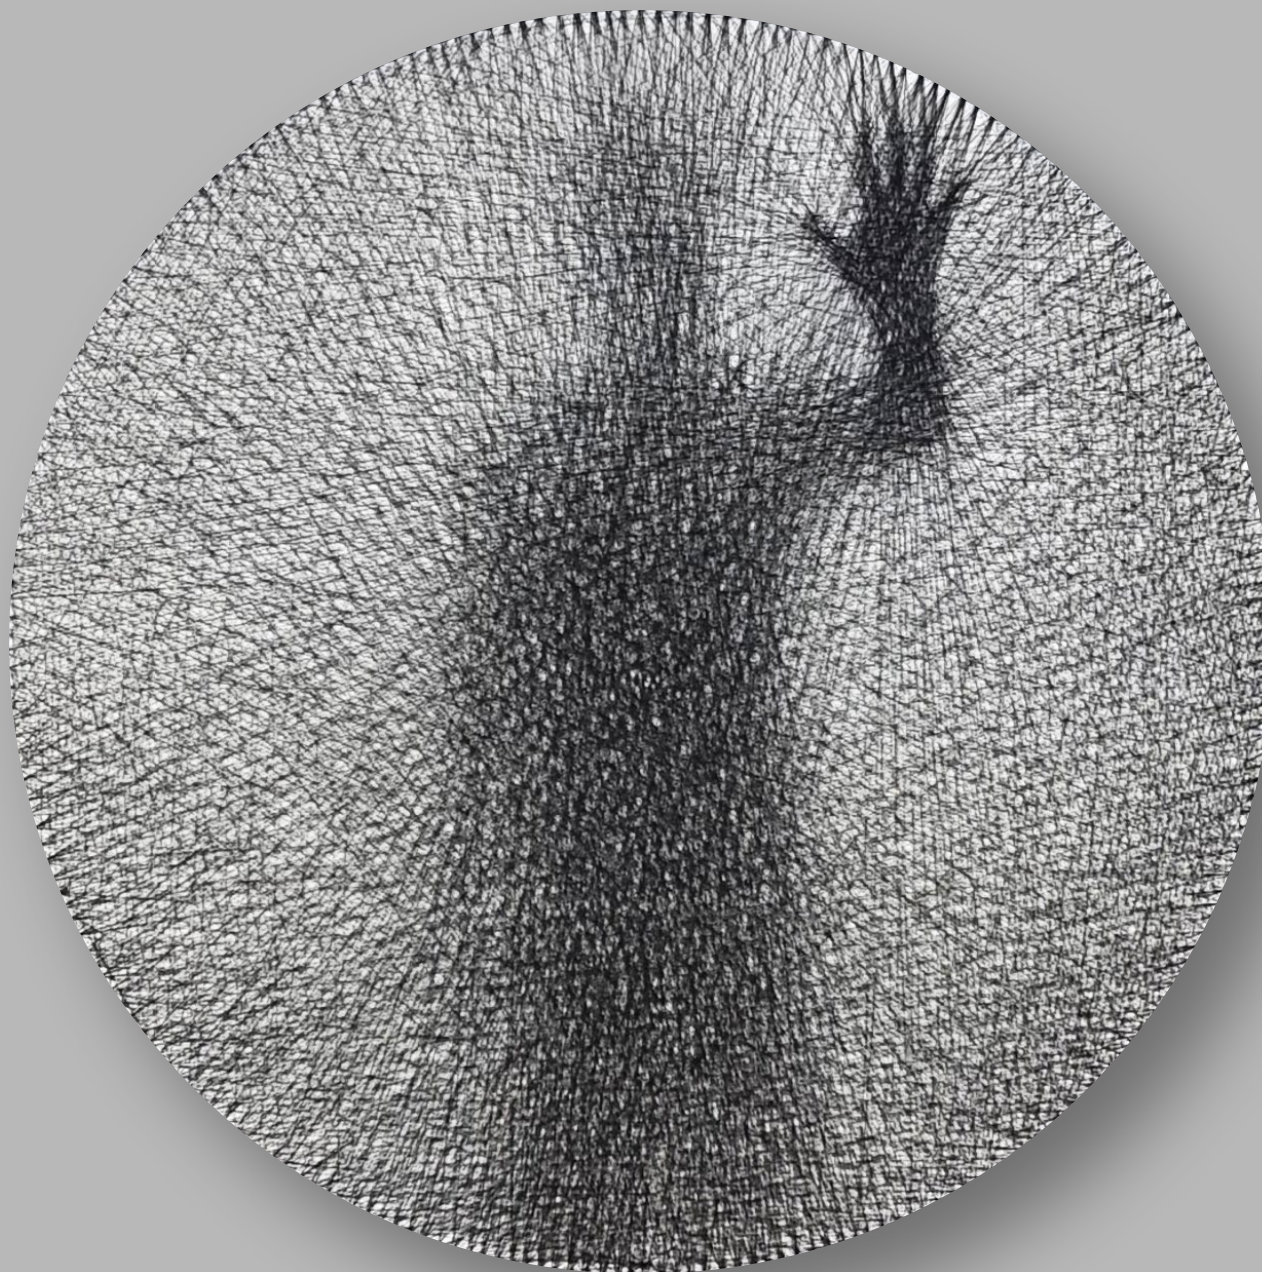

The exhibition opens at London's BSMT gallery with a private view on August 19th, with the show running from August 20th to 29, 2021. To attend the opening night RSVP via hello@bsmt.co.uk.
